SAKE

“DRINK OF THE GODS”

WHAT MAKES GOOD SAKE?

Rice

Good rice is expensive, but worth it

Milling

Generally, the more the rice is milled, the higher the quality of sake

Labor

More often than not, hand-crafted, labor intensive techniques lead to better sake

PREMIUM SAKE GRADES

JUNMAI

Made with nothing but rice, water, yeast and koji.

Usually a bit heavier and fuller than other types, often with good acidity.

HONJOZO

Made with rice, water, yeast, koji and a small amount of distilled alcohol.

Alcohol is added to help extract aromas and flavors from the fermenting mash.

It also tends to smoothen the sake.

GINJO

Rice milled to at least 60% and brewed with labor intensive steps.

Fermented at colder temperatures for longer periods.

Flavor is light and delicate, often with fruity or flowery touches.

DAIGINJO

Rice milled to at least 50% and the pinnacle of the sake brewer's art.

Brewed using painstaking, labor intensive methods.

Generally light, complex, and fragrant.

OTHER SAKE TYPES

NIGORI

Cloudy

Coarsely filtered to allow the unfermented rice particles to remain in the sake to increase feeling and flavor.

Creamier, chewier, and richer.

NAMA

Un-pasteurized

It can be fresh, zippy and lively.

GENSHU

Un-diluted

Usually a higher alcohol content.

TOKUBETSU

Special

It is a designation that a special production process was applied to a Junmai or Honjozo grade sake.

Usually, it means that a lower milling rate than required was used.
